Love Letters Shake France

'REVENGE' IN PARIS KILLING

PARIS, March 18.—Development under which France is trembling from end to end, and which promises a political upheaval of almost as sensational nature as the Dreyfus case, today followed the killing of Gaston Calmette, editor of the Figaro, by the wife of M. Calmette, until yesterday Minister of Finance.

The crime in which Mme. Calmette is confined is under guard. Rites, in which scores have been arrested, are constantly taking place, and reports of widespread changes in the government have served to arouse the whole republic to white heat.

Love letters written to Madame Calmette by her present husband when she was the wife of another man, one of which was published by Calmette, impelled Madame Calmette to kill Calmette. This appears on the surface of the sensational details so far revealed. Her defense will be "justification."

A more sinister touch is given to the affair, however, and one which may cause a scandal unequalled even by the Dreyfus affair, by the statement of Editor Bullier, who practically accused Calmette of treason. He declares that Calmette had in his possession letters which proved that Calmette took the part of "a certain great power" in a dispute between that power and France.

LETTERS DISCOVERED.
The authorities have seized documents and letters in the office of the murdered man which, it is expected, will plunge all concerned into the midst of a madhouse of exposure.

Over the city today a tremendous wave of indignation is sweeping. The last two nights have been marked by anti-republican demonstrations and by the arrest of more than fifty alleged royalist rioters.

Throughout the republic the cry is being raised that the tragedy is the outgrowth of the morose of the upper classes of the city that is fast coming to be considered by the small

Vacant Houses? What Nonsense!

Lots of folks look in the Boston American every day for houses, but how can you expect them to know about your house if it is not listed with the others?

Instruct your agent to put a little ad under the heading "Houses to Let," and see the result. To make doubly sure, tell him to run it two or three times.

The expense is trifling—much less than it costs to maintain an idle house—and the chance that you'll soon find a tenant are greatly in your favor.

Delay means loss. Better to take advantage of the renting power of the American's "Want Ad" columns. Fix up an ad at once and leave it with any of the American's "Want Ad" Stations, the branch office at 364 Washington Street, or the

Batavia Helpless at Sea with Nearly 300 Tourists Aboard

HAMBURG, Germany, March 18.—The Hamburg-American liner Batavia, bound from this port to Baltimore with 294 passengers on board, broke down at sea today. A wireless despatch from the vessel stated that both the hand and steam steering gear is out of commission and the vessel is helpless. It was said that the captain hopes to have repairs made by tomorrow night when the liner will proceed to Ponta Delgada in the Azores.

Cy Warman Better; Still Gravely Ill

CHICAGO, March 18.—Cy Warman, general assistant of the Grand Trunk Railway, and "the poet of the Rockies," who is ill at the Congress Hotel here, was improved today, although he was not considered out of danger. He will be confined to his bed for several days. Mr. Warman was taken ill suddenly when dining with friends in a downtown restaurant. He fainted and was taken to his room in the Congress Hotel. He was unconscious all of Sunday night and part of Monday. He called after a doctor and nurse remained at his bedside constantly.

Bill to Prevent Homes in Cellars

To prevent about 3,600 people from living in Boston cellars, the Woman's Municipal League will urge its bill before the Public Health Committee at the State House tomorrow morning at 10:30. The bill provides that no one shall be allowed to live in a cellar, and that basements cannot be occupied unless they are eight feet high and are properly ventilated.

Find C. H. Fellows Dead in Haverhill

HAVERTHILL, March 18.—Corporal H. Fellows, seventy-six, organizer and director of the Essex National Bank and director of the First National Bank, was found dead of apoplexy in his apartment at the Hotel Bartlett here today. Mr. Fellows was worth $100,000 and had been in the hardware business here for fifty years.

PROTEST AGAINST DEATH OF HIS HOME

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Declaring that repeal of the clause exempting American coastwise shipping from payment of Panama Canal tolls following Great Britain's protest would be "a part of the price that this nation must pay to get the help of a foreign power in the adjustment of the unfortunate Mexican situation," Senator Wesley L. Jones of Washington in the Senate today raised up his resolution asking President Wilson for full information as to all foreign protests against the enactment of the Democratic platform pledge on tolls.

"Why is it necessary for us to repeal a law of great domestic consequence in order that some foreign, unknown policy may be brought to a successful issue?" he asked. "The non-interference in Mexican affairs by foreign powers is to be bought at this price? Have we become so inert, so weak, so supine, so servile, that the Monroe Doctrine must be sustained and invigorated by the very powers against which it was invoked?"

Bill to Prevent Homes in Cellars

President Wilson's declaration that free tolls plainly contravene the Hay-Pauncefote treaty "is a more dogmatic, scholastic statement, contrary to the deliberate judgment of many of the greatest minds of the republic and to the decision of the Senate," the Senator declared.

"Should the exemption clause be repealed," the Senator asserted, "the burden of tolls must rest forever on our coastwise ships unless we see fit to relieve all vessels from tolls. What argument does the President present? What reason does he offer? Absolutely none. He says the exemption constitutes a mistaken economic policy from every point of view. He gives no reason, he offers no facts upon which to base his assertion so contrary to his public declaration in the last campaign."

"This exemption contravenes no treaty obligations either in letter or in spirit and therefore no question of national honor is involved. It is solely an economic one and the interests of our own people are alone to be considered. Let me assert as positively as language will permit that those who favor this exemption are in violation of the national honor as those who oppose it."

SPELLED DISASTER.
Senator Jones declared that to follow the dictation of another nation would lead to disastrous consequences and said that if it were followed the United States would waive its right to fortify the canal, to prevent an enemy warship from passing through it, to keep our own warships from being used by an enemy, to let citizens from our shores or to decide upon matters of consequence under the dictation of another nation.

He denounced the closing sentence which he said: "I shall not know how to deal with other matters of even greater delicacy and greater consequence if you do not grant it to me."

"I want to draw from these words," said the Senator, "the conclusion that I am unable to my country, but it is difficult to do so."

Senator Jones contradicted President Wilson's statement that the tolls were not a part of the price.

D.O. IVES DEAD AT HIS HOME

David O. Ives, transportation manager of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and succeeded one of the most expert men on railroad matters in the country, died today at his home at Chestnut Hill, Brookline. His death came as a complete shock to members of the Chamber of Commerce, and some of his associates in that body were when they learned he was dead.

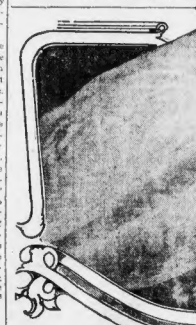

While members of the chamber knew Mr. Ives had been confined to his home with a throat affliction for several months, none knew his condition was serious, and his death was entirely unexpected.

"His death is a great blow to the Chamber—a very serious blow," said one member. "He died when we needed him most, just at this crisis in New England's transportation affairs. His master mind would help us at this time of reorganizing our railroads."

PLAN MEMORIAL.
Plans were made this afternoon for action by the Chamber in regard to the death.

Several months ago Mr. Ives was prominently named for the Interstate Commerce Commission. He was endorsed by every trade body in New England, and it was stated at the time he would have been appointed. But it did not come to pass.

Mr. Ives was chairman of the joint classification committee representing all trunk lines east of the Mississippi when he was appointed in the Spring of 1902 as chief of the board of transportation which had then been newly established by the Boston Merchants' Association, which was then headed by James J. Storrow. His father, S. H. Ives, ranked with the best railroad lawyers in the country. He was chief counsel for the Eastern Railroad in this State before it was consolidated with the Boston & Maine. Then he was appointed counsel for the entire Boston & Maine system.

WELLESLEY FIRE HEROINE

Muriel Arthur, class of '15, was cheered today by 1,200 Wellesley girls leaving for home following the fire at the college. It was Miss Arthur who roused other girl students and professors of their fire peril. Her coolness was contagious, all the girls taking courage at her reassuring words and manner.

Packing Houses Shut as Priest Is Buried

CHICAGO, March 18.—Every packing plant in the stock yards district closed down today during the funeral of the Rev. Father Maurin J. Dorney, pastor of St. Gabriel's Church. Only once before was any wheel stopped in the packing house district on account of a funeral. This was when President McKinley was buried. In addition every saloon in the district and every business house within several miles of St. Gabriel's locked its doors.

REBELS CAUGHT IN DEEP GORGE BY FEDERALS; LEADER IS SLAIN

EL PASO, March 18.—Francisco Villa, the dominant figure in the Mexican revolution, faces utter rout in the great battle now raging between Escalon and Jiminez. An army of 3,500 men is under attack, front and rear, and General Benavides, who was in command, has been killed, according to dispatches to the Huerta sympathizers here.

REBELS CAUGHT IN DEEP GORGE.

As the story of the battle comes over the wires, the rebel forces met the Federals in the gorge north of Escalon, through which the railroad runs. At the same time, a Federal force was pushing northward on the opposite side of the mountain, beating back the opposition of a rebel force sent to delay them.

"The Mexicans say that Villa rushed reinforcements into the gorge, but that this second Federal force rounded the mountains and took Jiminez, which lies in Villa's rear, cutting off his line to the north and pinning his army in the mountains for annihilation."

Lights Burning at Noon in Boston on 'Black Wednesday'

This was Boston's "Black Wednesday." Some said it was the darkest day in Boston in thirty-three years—since the famous "Yellow Day" on September 6, 1881.

The Edison Light Company had to start extra dynamo to supply a sudden tremendous demand for power. The company's experts estimate that 350,000 electric lamps were turned on when the darkness came. This many lamps would light a road from Boston to Pittsburgh on both sides of the road, lights only two feet apart.

It got so dark that these things happened:

Work was called off on a number of buildings and on the new Custom House tower.

Shipping in the harbor became hazardous.

Victorian banks, stores and buildings generally had to use artificial light.

The trading room of the Chamber of Commerce—known as the best lighted room in the city—became so dark the blackboard figures were invisible a few feet away.

Pedestrians generally groped their way along the streets.

This was the serious end. There were numerous flashes too. Such as that in Melrose Highlands chickens went to roost.

Men out in Milton awoke at 3 a. m., called his alarm clock a "har" and then rolled over for a long snooze.

Superstitious women in Quincy, thinking it was Doomsday, began to sing hymns.

Herd of cows in the country refused to go into the meadows and took a quick retreat back to the barn.

And there were others.

Through the thick pest of mist and daylight darkness, hail began to fall shortly before noon in Boston and rolled onward at a sharp rate. Hail followed. Up at Worcester two inches of snow fell.

For grays today bent all the dull gray days the poets have ever raved about. It was a day at the Dignities and the Dignities. To the other inhabitants it recalled vividly Boston's "Yellow Day" in 1881, when it grew so dark that street lamps were lighted and was a day when the number of artificial lights that sent their rays into the atmosphere.

FACTORIES SHUT DOWN TO THWART HUERTA'S PRESS GANG

MEXICO CITY, March 15.—Many factories were compelled to shut down today because of the operations of press gangs sent out to enforce the law.

Some of the men and women of the working classes have been taken within the last week to increase the number of the press gangs. Some of the women have been released after protests by their employers, but the majority have been turned over to the military camps.

DENY GREAT BRITAIN WILL RECOGNIZE THE REBELS, IF VICTORIOUS

WASHINGTON, March 15.—That Great Britain will not recognize the rebels, if victorious, was declared today by the British ambassador in Mexico City.

The ambassador, Lord Dufferin, declared that the British government would not recognize the rebels, if victorious, because they would not be recognized by the United States.

Jay Gould Outplays British Champion

PHILADELPHIA, March 15.—Jay Gould, amateur tennis court champion, showed no loss of form today when he received his battle with George F. Cover, the British professional champion, for the world's tennis title.

Gould won the match in four sets to a score of 6-2, outplaying his British opponent as clearly as in Monday's match when he captured four straight sets. After winning the first set after the score of the match stood 5 to 1 in favor of the American, he needed only two more sets to win the contest.

COLLEGES SEE FIRE LESSON AT WELLESLEY

The superb way in which the Wellesley College students showed their discipline during the burning of College Hall, Tuesday morning, has been praised in all parts of the United States.

The regular fire drill of the young women in that building showed itself at the fire. They knew what to do and how to do it. In all probability there might have been some accidents during the burning of so much property had not the young women demonstrated their skill in emergency cases like this.

WOMAN'S DEATH THREAT QUOTED BY WHITBECK

Andrew J. Whitbeck of the Hotel Cambridge resumed his testimony today in the continued trial of Mrs. Mary A. Adams' $25,000 breach of promise suit against him. He testified that on one occasion Mrs. Adams called him by telephone to ask him to meet her, that he refused to meet her alone, and that she cried: "If you don't meet me, I will shoot you."

Attorney Tilden showed Mr. Whitbeck a $25 check from him to Mrs. Adams dated in 1911, and he said he gave it to Mrs. Adams to pay her rent.

Q—Did you give her any jewelry after 1910? A—No.

Q—Did you give her a locket containing your picture? A—No.

Q—Did you give her the ring? (The ring was handed to Attorney Tilden by Mrs. Adams. She drew it from her finger. He handed it to Mr. Tilden and Mr. Tilden showed it to Mr. Whitbeck.) A—Yes, I gave it to her in 1910 or 1911.

Q—Did you give her that bracelet she is wearing? A—Yes, in 1908.

Q—Did you essentially value the silver backed brush, comb and mirror which you said she took from the trunk in your room? A—Yes, my wife gave them to me.

Q—Did she ever come to the office? A—Yes. When I could, I got out of the way. At other times, I took her for a walk to get her away from the office. I never had an opportunity to meet her after the settlement.

It was then cross-examined by Attorney Tilden, and a typewritten memorandum was put in evidence. He said it was copied from pencil notes he had kept. Some of the items read:

"Tried to get Mrs. Adams on Boylston street, July, 1907."

"Commenced hearing at No. 6 Winchester street with Mrs. Adams, December, 1907."

"Gut license to marry Josephine Vandell of New York, April 14, 1908."

"Mrs. Adams threatened to break up this engagement."

FIRST ANNIVERSARY OF MY GAT FIRE SALE OF SHOES

$200,000 Worth of Mostly New 1914 Spring Shoes
SACRIFICED BY SHEINWALD
AT LAST YEAR'S FIRE SALE PRICES
BEGINNING TOMORROW

To Celebrate My Gigantic Fire Sale of One Year Ago I Have Prepared to Give the People of Boston and Vicinity a Sale Surpassing in Magnitude Anything Ever Given by Me or Any House in America.

3 BIG OPENING FEATURES OF SALE
EXAMPLES OF BARGAIN GIVING

700 Pairs of the well-known EMERSON SHOES for Men—$4 and $5 grades, 1.70 for 67c

1000 Pairs of Ladies' RUBBER SOLE OXFORDS, worth from $4 to $4.50, are going to be the rage this Spring, for 1.97

EVERYBODY in Boston, Greater Boston and Eastern Massachusetts remembers my Mammoth Fire Sale a year ago this month. On March 9th, all the upper floors of this building were burnt out—the water damaging to an extent over one hundred and thirty thousand dollars' worth of new Spring Shoes. My insurance settlement allowed me to practically give away the shoes. The sale was the most wonderful demonstration of shoe selling ever seen in this city. Its magnitude startled me. Whole families came to my store and bought shoes enough for a whole year. That fire sale was my greatest advertisement; it was worth thousands of dollars to me for future business. It showed the people what Sheinwald could do for them in fine shoes at low prices. That sale encouraged me so much by the great response of the public to my bargain offerings that I determined to give the people another chance at even a bigger sale this year.

I Planned This Giant Anniversary Sale Six Months in Advance. I have made mammoth cash purchases from the manufacturers when other dealers were not buying. I took advantage of every cash and trade discount, and of every opportunity to buy for my trade when I could buy at a sacrifice. I left no stone unturned to gather together the greatest stock of fine new 1914 Spring Shoes for Men, Women and Children ever presented in this city.

Last Year the Fire Sale Prices Were for Damaged Shoes

This Year the Prices for Perfect Shoes Are Same as Fire Sale Prices

Untrimmed Chip Hats

New styles manufactured to retail at 75c and $1.00—black and colors. Will go on sale commencing this morning, at 25c

A Boston manufacturer who needed ready money has closed out to us for cash a large lot of good quality chip straw hats—recently made for this season's trade. The lot embraces a wide range of new styles in black and colors which are salable at the present and we believe they would sell readily in the usual way at 75c and $1.00.

We have bought them at a big reduction off regular prices and we therefore are able to place them on sale during the next two days at an extraordinarily low price for advertising purposes.

Here Are Six of the Styles
There are many others just as good which we cannot show here on account of lack of space. New Spring Styles—made of chip straw braids. Actually worth 75c and $1.00. Our sale price 25c

No Mail Orders Filled
On account of the low price this lot should sell immediately. It is therefore impracticable to try to fill mail orders.
Hats Trimmed FREE
Untrimmed shapes bought in this sale will be trimmed free (if trimmings are bought here).

THAW'S MOTHER PLEAS FOR CON- WIT GLYNN

Mrs. Mary Conley Thaw, devoted mother of Harry K. Thaw, and fifteen other members of the Thaw family, are going to Albany, Thursday, to plead with Governor Glynn, Attorney General Carmody and the New York Legislature to abandon the attempt to extradite Thaw from New Hampshire, according to dispatches from New York today.

William Travers Jerome having demanded a special fee of $25,000 in the Thaw case, with a total bill of over $42,000, a sensational case is expected in the New York Legislature.

The bill dealing with Jerome's fee is expected to come up tomorrow. In anticipation of the visit of Mrs. Thaw and others of the relatives of "the man from Mattawana," Assemblyman Holden today began an attempt to have the House Committee report his resolution asking the Legislature to probe the expenses thus far incurred in the attempt to place Thaw again behind the bars of the insane asylum.

WANTS STATE $50,000.
"Thaw is costing the State $50,000 per year in expenses," asserted Golden.

"Now Jerome comes with a bill for $25,000 for acting as special attorney-general."

"This is a sheer waste of money, my resolution does not declare Thaw's innocence or guilt. A jury has acquitted him of crime."

"His mental state is of interest only to lawyers and physicians. This does not jeopardize the interests of the people."

Senator Fawcett today stands sponsor for a bill introduced in the New York Legislature to appropriate $40,000 to pay the expenses of Jerome and others involved in the pursuit and prosecution of Thaw.

FRINDEN LARGELY CLAIMS.
The bill was introduced at the request of Attorney-General Carmody, who submitted a full report of the case and an itemized expense account to Senator Fawcett.

The largest single amount asked is a $25,000 fee for William T. Jerome's services as a special deputy. Claimed other attorneys are: Bernard Jacobs, Lancaster, N. H., $5,000; Jacobs, Hull, Gloucester, N. H., $5,000; Hester Vetter, Coatesville, N. H., $5,000; T. C. Cagrain, Montreal, N. H., and Jacob Niook, Sherbrooke, Que., $500.

"I can observe," said Carmody, "that the charges for services of Mr. Jacobs and Mr. Jerome cover not only most of the expenses, but any future services to be rendered in reference to proceedings taken in this case."

The special train which carried Mr. Jerome from North Andover to Colebrook, N. H., on the occasion of Thaw's arrest near the latter place, cost $525.

The bill also would appropriate $745 for the payment of A. T. Baker, medical expert in the case.

HERE IS THE MISSING BOY BOSTON WOMAN CLAIMS SHE SAW

WASHINGTON, March 18.—The battle in the Senate to prevent the repeal of the trial exemption clause of the Canal act began today.

Senator Jones of Washington speaks on the resolution he introduced March 4, the day following President Wilson's demand for Congressional submission to the British demand with respect to tolls.

Another phase of the controversy also may be injected today by Senator Pendleton's resolution, which also attacked the same measure. In this resolution the President was requested to inform the Senate what other matters of "extreme delicacy and nearer import" he had admitted when he delivered his message, and "what connection such matters have with the proposed repeal of the toll exemption."

Senator Jones is one of the most aggressive opponents of the proposed repeal of the toll exemption. He accuses the rest of the Senators from the Pacific slope to the Atlantic of being "too timid" to support the repeal. He wants to know whether any country other than England has proposed to repeal the toll exemption.

Against the administration by the United States Government in its own internal affairs.

Senator Ashurst, of Arizona, is the latest Senator who has intended to support the President who has come out in favor of an aggressive policy against interference of foreign powers.

During the floor in debate on the River and Harbor bill, Representative Julius Kahn delivered a brilliant oration, which left the President's plan to repeal the Canal toll act without a vestige of shadow.

NEW HAVEN TO DISSOLVE; NO FEDERAL SUIT

WASHINGTON, March 18.—President Wilson today is known to be pleased with the result of the cabinet decision of the New Haven Railroad system. President Wilson today is known to be pleased with the result of the cabinet decision of the New Haven Railroad system.

The American learns today from a high official authority that the administration backed the Attorney-General in his plan to dissolve the combine without recourse to the Sherman Anti-Trust law.

The proposals, as related to the New Haven, were:

That the New Haven agree to discontinue itself from the various subsidiary companies in the next three months.

That the trustees, selected jointly by the Department of Justice and officials of the States interested, shall have the absolute right to investigate into all phases of business.

In return for this the government will not attempt to revive the criminal case of the Sherman Anti-Trust law, nor will it endeavor to subordinate the civil case.

Special significance was attached to the visit to the Attorney-General by Chairman Howard Elliott, accompanied by his attorney, to submit a plan almost identical with that which the Attorney-General offered.

BALDWIN WINS FROM ALGER IN SNAPPY BATTLE

By RINGSIDE.

Matty Baldwin of Charlestown won the star bout of the opening meeting of the new University A. C. at Cambridge by outpointing George Alger of Cambridge in ten rounds of clean boxing. Though beaten, Alger put up a very good fight and until the closing round had held his more experienced opponent fairly even.

In the last session, Matty loosened up and by using a wicked left jab to halt the desperate rushing tactics adopted by Alger, succeeded in getting enough of a shade to be awarded the verdict.

The club opening was a great success. In the first six days, more than 1500 fans attended the fights, and the receipts were very fast bouza.

At the very start of the big event, it was evident that Baldwin was somewhat shaky about his chances of winning. He had been resorted to a splendid blocking game, which had Alger keptput up well. He had been using his right hand with good use of his left, and been a constant target on Alger's ribs with the left hand.

ALGER FORTIFIED FIGHTING.

The Cambridge boxer, however, forced the fighting at all times, and was in the lead at the end of the first round, and at the end of the second round. He was at times with vicious right and left uppercuts.

In the second round Baldwin claimed that he had been fouled again in the third, but Referee Cougherty said that Baldwin was not fouled.

In the sixth round the Charleston was boxed with a new opponent, a half-dozen exchanges in the middle of the ring peppered Alger's head with a variety of punches to the right and left hooks.

The next two rounds were rather tame, Alger causing a stir by attempting to slip over a haymaker from the other fighter.

In the ninth, however, the Cambridge boy caught Baldwin unaware and landed a right hand to the chin. Baldwin's midriff had him rather in the air.

Alger followed up his advantage by a series of punches to the stomach by a very good margin.

DECISION PROVED POPULAR.

Goodwin of Boston and Gus Murphy of Cambridge. Goodwin with his bulrushes and quick punches had Murphy groggy early in the go, but along toward the finish, the native son attacked a few healthy hooks to his opponent's jaw and at the end of the sixth had Goodwin wobbling badly.

Dave Powers of Malden got the surprise of his life in the fourth round of his bout with Terry Smalley of Everett, when he walked into a wild right swing and went down for the count. But Dave Powers had a few of the best of the affair.

The opening match was a fair and fast draw between Paddy Green of Cambridge and Johnny Duffy of Jamaica Plain.

At next week's meeting Dan Desher of Cambridge and Joe Egan of Boston, a pair of welterweights, will be the main attraction.

We Need Backbone in the White House==

And an American, Not a Snob, in Our London Embassy

The feeling of the United States is expressed in the Senate's protest against Ambassador Page's servile attitude toward England.

The common sense, patriotism and indignation of the United States are admirably voiced in Mr. Underwood's protest against the President's trucking to Great Britain, his extraordinary repudiation of Democratic doctrines, and incidental swallowing of his own words.

We shall quote you exactly the President's talk on the Panama Canal when he was working for the presidency, and we shall prove that Mr. Wilson eats his own words, while betraying the people and the Democratic party in his present attitude.

The people are tired of watchful and cowardly waiting in Mexico.

They are disgusted with the pusillanimous subservience to Great Britain in the Panama Canal matter.

As for public feeling in connection with Mr. Wilson's Ambassador Page, and his most recent utterance, it is difficult to express that temperately.

The people of the United States have spent years in building up the Monroe Doctrine, and the people of Europe had learned to respect it.

Now comes that extraordinary person, Mr. Page, the publisher and business associate of President Wilson, and unfortunately the Ambassador of the United States in England.

This Mr. Page has capped the climax of sycophantic snobbery and toadyism in his attempted repudiation of the Monroe Doctrine.

It was bad enough to have this discreditable representative of the United States telling the English that the United States is "British ruled and British led."

It was bad enough to have him misrepresenting every decent American citizen in his toadying efforts to gain British favor.

But now comes a matter more serious, one that the Senate of the United States is compelled to notice with protest, one that our vaudeville Secretary of State has been compelled to investigate.

Mr. Page, following his usual tone of humble servility, speaking as an American to Englishmen, began, as usual, in his most recent speech by declaring that it gave America great happiness in building the Panama Canal to know that England would derive THE MOST BENEFIT from that construction.

You might imagine a colored gentleman of the slave days declaring that his chief satisfaction in raising a big family was based on the fact that dear ma'am would be the chief gainer.

But it is hard to imagine an Ambassador of the United States, even such a man as Mr. Wilson, with an eye to his private business, sent over there, capable of the preposterous sycophancy that disgraced Page and those whom he is supposed to represent.

Under ordinary conditions this country could stand being represented in England by a snob. The thing has happened before.

But to have a combination snob and fool, speaking for the President of the United States, OFFICIALLY REPUDIATE THE MONROE DOCTRINE AND DECLARE THAT WE DO NOT TAKE IT SERIOUSLY, is a matter that the Senate may well investigate.

Mr. Page said to the Englishmen, after covering them with his inexhaustible supply of servile flattery, "the Monroe Doctrine simply means this, that the United States would prefer that no European government should gain more land in the New World."

There you have the humble, bootlicking interpretation of a fundamental American doctrine.

Speaking for the President of the United States, and as Ambassador from the American nation, he says that this country would PREFER not to have the Monroe Doctrine made a joke.

The English must think, listening to this man, whose utter nonentity they do not realize, that America has changed wonderfully since we have put a professor in the White House and sent that Professor's Publisher and business partner to represent us in London.

Quite a change between "you shall not," which is the American meaning, and "we prefer that you should not," which is the Page Wilson modern Monroe Doctrine.

The United States says to England and the rest of the world: "You shall leave this country alone. You shall take no more territory. You shall not increase your territory. You shall not meddle, and we mean it."

The nations hitherto have taken us at our word; they knew that Cleveland meant what Monroe meant, they knew that Roosevelt meant what Cleveland meant.

And they knew that the United States intends to rule this half of the earth.

But now comes the professor's business partner, the cringing little money-making Publisher, eager for the approval of the grand society in which he suddenly finds himself.

If Publisher Page were only representing himself or Professor Wilson he would be all very well for him to say, "I do not say that you SHALL not kick me. I only say, humbly, that I PREFER not to be kicked."

But it is a rather different matter for Uncle Sam to be presented at court, in an humble attitude, telling the British, who were driven from this continent by a handful of colonists, that the present nation of 90,000,000 would PREFER not to be kicked.

If the repudiation of the Monroe Doctrine came only from a sycophantic snob suddenly promoted from an obscure publisher's office to be the United States spokesman in London, the thing would not be so serious.

The Secretary of State would simply send a cable, "Pay no attention to that silly individual," and that would end it.

Unfortunately, the English have only too good a right to be

AMERICAN HISTORY REVERSED—NO. 3 THE SIGNING OF THE DECLARATION OF DEPENDENCE AT WASHINGTON, D. C., 1914

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service

On June 7, 1776, a committee was appointed to prepare the Declaration of Independence. It was composed of Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Roger Sherman and Robert R. Livingston. Debates on the committee's unanimous report were long and animated. History records there was great opposition to voting for independence at all. Many objected to such phrases as England's "long train of abuses and usurpations," and King George's efforts to "extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us." But the leading Americans of that time—those whose names are glorious in our history—all stood together against "British aggression," "dictation" or "usurpation." After three weeks' debate the Declaration was signed. Today the situation is reversed. The Leading American Citizen is on the side of Great Britain and is trying to persuade his countrymen to sign a Declaration of Dependence to England in the matter of our right to control the Panama Canal, built at our expense, in our own territory, at a cost of $400,000,000.

sume that when Page speaks they hear the voice of the President of the United States.

When President Wilson appointed his Publisher to the highest diplomatic place he not only discharged a personal and business obligation, but appointed an intimate friend and business associate, who knew him, the President's, views and could represent them. Therefore, Page in all probability, and the English will so interpret it, was speaking not only as Ambassador, but expressing what he personally knew to be Mr. Wilson's sentiments.

The President of the United States, in a message which shocks the nation, appeals to Congress to repudiate an act of Congress, to repudiate the pledges of the Democratic party, to disregard his, Wilson's, own pledge in favor of free Panama tolls. And he makes this strange and unpatriotic plea, boldly stating that if Congress will not permit him to placate the British, give them their way at Panama and admit the United States in the wrong, HE, WILSON, WILL NOT BE ABLE TO CARRY ON SUCCESSFULLY HIS NEGOTIATIONS WITH FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

In other words, the President, whose Ambassador and business associates say that we are English- and English-ruled, tells the United States Congress that we must be ruled by the English in regulating the canal that we built, and he expressed flatly his fear of the power that he seeks to placate.

This country has grown from 4,000,000 in population to 90,000,000 in population between George Washington's day and this.

The 4,000,000 of George Washington's day told the British that they were not afraid of them—and they proved it. And the 90,000,000 Americans of this day are made to declare through the mouth of Wilson that we are afraid of the English and must permit ourselves to be ruled by them to avoid trouble.

On top of this declaration of timidity by the President comes his Ambassador's official statement that we PREFER not to have the Monroe Doctrine ignored by the British.

NOT A VERY PROUD DAY FOR THE UNITED STATES, to put it mildly.

We have told you that President Wilson said his own words, besides repudiating the policy of his party and the act of Congress, when he humbly begs for free tolls to placate England.

Convince yourself by reading what Mr. Wilson said on August 16, 1812, to a gathering of 9,500 farmers at Washington Park, N. J.

Mr. Wilson was then Governor of New Jersey and an active candidate for the presidency of the United States. He wanted votes. He had not then discovered that the destiny of the country is to be English-ruled and English-led, that the Monroe Doctrine means only A PREFERENCE for non-interference on this continent, or that the United States cannot manage its affairs unless it gains England's approval by submitting and backing water in the matter of the Panama Canal. This is what the President had to say on that occasion:

"Now, there is another matter. You know we are digging a tremendous ditch across the isthmus of Panama. It is predicted by the engineers in charge of that colossal enterprise that we shall be able to open it to the ships of the world by the year 1818. What interest have you in opening it to the ships of the world? We do not own the ships of the world. By a very ingenious process, which I would not keep you standing in the hot sun long enough to outline, the legislation of the United States has destroyed the merchant marine of the United States. The chief road by which your crops travel to the Orient is through the Suez Canal. They do not go around by the Pacific. Most of your maps do not show you the short road to the Orient, because they are spread out flat.

"If you will get a globe and draw a circle around the globe you will see your short road is through the Suez Canal, not across the Pacific, and that the Western farmer, therefore, has to ship his crops across the continent in order to reach the ships that are to take that road. And when his crops reach the port, do they find American ships waiting for them? Not at all. In most years not a single ship carrying the American flag goes through that canal carrying freight. "Some ships carry the American flag through that canal, but they are mostly private yachts. A friend of mine who has just traveled around the world told me that he did not see the American flag once between New York and Hong Kong, going by the way of the canal, until he reached the island of Ceylon, and then saw the flag of Mr. James Gordon Bennett's yacht. If the ship owners of the nation carry your grain and cargoes they are going to carry them by routes and to markets which suit them, not the routes and the markets which are chosen by you. One of the great objects in cutting the great ditch across the isthmus of Panama is to allow farmers who are near the seaboard, and then have coastwise steamers carry their products down around through the canal and up the Pacific coast or down the coast of South America.

"Now, at present there are no ships to do that, and one of the bills pending—passed, I believe, yesterday by the Senate as it has been—provides for free toll for American ships through that canal, and prohibits any ship from passing through which is owned by any American railroad company. You see the object of that, don't you. (Applause.)

"We don't want the railroads to compete with themselves, because we understand that kind of competition. We want water carriage to compete with land carriage, so as to be perfectly sure that you are going to get better rates around the canal than you would across the continent."

"The farmers of this country are, in my judgment, just as much concerned in the policy of the United States with regard to that canal as any other class of citizens of the United States. Probably they are more concerned than any other one class, and what I am most desirous to see is the farmers of the country coming forward as partners in the great national undertakings and taking a wide national, nay, international, view of these great matters, feeling all the pulses of the world that beat in the great arteries of their own life and prosperity. Every ditch that is done in the interest of cheap transportation is done directly for the farmer as well as for other men. So that you ought not to grudge the millions poured out for the deepening and opening of old and new waterways."

"Our platform is not molasses to catch flies. It means business. It means what it says. It is the utterance of earnest and honest men who intend to do business along these lines and who are not willing to see whether they can catch votes with those promises before they determine whether they are going to act upon them or not."

"They know the American people are now taking notice in a way in which they never took notice before, and gentlemen who talk one way and do another are going to be retired to very quiet and private retreats."

Please read again that paragraph of President Wilson's speech, saying:

"Our platform is not molasses to catch flies. It means business. It means what it says. It is the utterance of earnest and honest men."

Then compare that utterance of the vote-seeker, or candidate, with that servile message sent to Congress imploring the representatives of the people to bow to the English.

And compare with Wilson's speech, made by the candidate, the word of Page representing Wilson ELECTED:

"We would prefer not to have you get any more land in this continent."

A pleasant, proud day for the United States.

Is Motherhood Woman's Only Mission?

By EDWIN MARKHAM

RORA MATREID's book, "A Survey of the Woman Problem," which is given out in a scholarly translation by Herman Schaffner, is a volume that sweeps up many aspects of the woman question. What do you say to this?

"Nature had no other purpose in view, so far as woman was concerned, than to adapt her for motherhood, even at the cost of rendering all her other capacities inferior to those of the man. Nature may have laid a heavy burden upon woman, but civilization has increased it to an unbearable degree. "Civilization being almost entirely a product of man shows as such results as these that it is based chiefly upon his own needs and requirements. In primitive conditions motherhood forms no bar nor hindrance to the woman in any direction. It is only under the exactions of civilization that woman is doomed, because of her materiality, to occupy the position of a subordinate and dependent creature, a human being of the second order."

"It is only where civilization has attained a lofty level, and the consequences of certain influences of culture have reached their full development to man, that there presents itself to woman any possibility of taking part in the work of civilization beyond the narrow circle and thus obviating the coarseness of masculine culture."

"But even with the limitations which this masculine culture has imposed upon the female sex, its mission has never been as narrowly restricted as by those anti-feminists who would confine woman entirely to the duties of motherhood. They overlook the fact that the limiting of feminine activities to the family circle is neither related to the most primitive nor to the highest forms of woman's life. "Even the assumption that the highest destiny of woman lies in motherhood is refuted by the history of civilization. The moral precepts of different nations have at all times given particular importance to the renunciation of motherhood under certain circumstances, and the high value set upon virginity in the service of religious representations proving plainly enough that human society is granted to certain women an other vocation than the so-called natural one."

"The only means capable of combating the evils which have arisen out of a high degree of civilization must be sought in that civilization itself. The chief problem of all sociological endeavor is how to overcome the imperfections of the intermediate stages by a still further intensification of civilization. It is in this sphere that we behold the changes which are to prepare these new conditions for woman under which she may be enabled to devote herself to the duties of a higher spiritual life without resigning her duties as an elemental being—conditions which will lower her with that highest triumph of all civilization—the unhampered self-realization of the individual."

"It would be an unreasonable hope far exceeding anything one might demand of the average masculinity to expect to bring about these changes solely through the work and knowledge of men. The problem of obtaining a different position for women in the social order of the future is something that must be solved by women themselves. It is that which forms the greatest social mission of every woman who, by intellectual activity, has risen above the traditional sphere of her sex."
